JOURNAL DESCRIPTION

The 'temilavoro.it' is an academic full open-access e-journal on labour law broadly conceived. It has the ambition to fill a gap in the field of labour studies. Although there are many labour law journals and many others on social security, none of them deals in a dialectical way with the conflict between law and economics by an upside-down perspective. Namely, coping with markets and social justice issues, handling economics devices by legal scholar point of view. Practical implications are mostly investigated from either a legal or economics or law and economics visual. However, an open discussion among every school of thought from the point of the view of le law can be said instead missed. Accordingly, the 'temilavoro.it' intends to increase and to promote a pluralistic debate on the future of labour law. It aims to recover a role of labour law in a globalized world, refers social models that, taking into account and not ignoring economics reasons at all, as they were strangers to the law, can provide solutions to the threats the neo-liberal trend poses to the quality of life, decent work and social justice.

The temilavoro.it is a continuous increase yearly magazine published and distributed in electronic version
